BAU China, the leading trade fair in the Asia-Pacific region for "Building Systems Solutions, High-End Technologies and Materials" was held from October 29 to November 1, 2020. Since its premiere in 2017 as FENESTRATION BAU China, exhibition segments have been integrated, similar to BAU in Munich. With the newly created RealTech Expo, the Real Estate segment is to be further expanded in the future. BAU China is organized by MMU BAU Fenestration, a holding subsidiary of Messe München.

"Despite the effects of the Covid-19 pandemic and the associated international travel restrictions, we are very satisfied with the results of BAU China," reports Dr. Reinhard Pfeiffer, Vice Chairman of the Board of Management of Messe München. "With an exhibition area of 39000 net-square meters (95000sqm gross) and over 48000 visitors (90000 visits), the result is below the previous year's figure, but exhibitors are highly recognised the result of BAU CHINA. They said: 'BAU CHINA attracted so many professional visitors, it is the most successful exhibition in Asia market this year.' It also shows that BAU China is becoming increasingly important for the construction and architecture industry. BAU China is the market place for the future and innovation.

The importance of the event is also underlined by Hubert Aiwanger, Deputy Bavarian Minister-President and Minister of Economic Affairs, who personally opened the fair a year ago and who this year sent his greetings by video message: "Especially in Corona times, we see how important it is that construction improves, that we have the best properties and that we increase energy efficiency. People are once again concentrating more on their individual living environment, and this trade fair fits in perfectly here".

Impulses for the building of tomorrow

Once again, the China Architecture Design Expo (CADE) was very well attended. The visitors of CADE break the record. Architects are playing a more and more important role in architecture industry in China. As a show which is focusing on the communication between architects and solution providers, CADE is significantly unique platform in this industry. CADE is a segment of BAU China, which was organized for the third time in cooperation with the Architectural Society of China. The central theme of the exhibition this year was "People, Architecture and Technology". CADE provided insights into approaches to solutions, how new technologies and modern architecture interact. The trend topics in the industry continue to be sustainability, energy efficiency and the implementation of digital solutions in construction. With the central theme "The Future of Building in China", the BAU Congress China, an integral part of the trade fair, picked up on the trend themes of the industry. With its nationally and internationally renowned speakers, the BCC was a magnet for visitors. The International Urban Project Award (IUPA), which was awarded for the second time at the BCC, also dealt with the future of building. 5 projects were awarded this year.

Although international enterprises adjusted their marketing strategy because of the Covid-19, Some high quality international brands like Hoermann, CMECH, Nabco still were present at FBC2020 "International Selected Area" because of the increasing importance of China market. Meanwhile, in the Window Demonstration Area, as in 2019, window manufacturers were also able to have the installation of their innovative windows on various surfaces presented live and certified.

New cooperation with the Roofing and Waterproofing Association of China

Since the event's premiere as FENESTRATION BAU China, segments have been consistently integrated in a similar way to BAU in Munich. The new segments now cover more than 5,000 square meters, including Architecture Solutions/CADE, Digitalization & Building Automation, Flooring, Roofing and Waterproofing. A further step in the expansion of this segment is the new cooperation with the Roofing and Water-proofing Association of China. Randy Wang (CEO of MMU BAU Fenestration) and Emily Zhang (COO), who are responsible for the exhibition, explain: "We are pleased to be able to offer our visitors further added value with this cooperation - from 2021, the China Roofing & Waterproofing Expo will be held in co-location with BAU China at SNIEC".
